Sisal

Agave Sisalina is a strong, green spiky bush which flourishes in the sub-tropical climate of Tanzania and Kenya. The giant leaves of the Sisal Agave plant are the raw material for sisal carpets. These leaves are harvested and the mesophyll is washed out. The fibres are then cleaned, washed and dried in the sun. Fibres are finished, treated, spun and finally woven. It is latex backed for stability and prevents slipping on wooden or tiled floors.

Seagrass

Seagrass as its name implies, is a grass. It is grown in the paddy fields of China, and at a certain time of the growing season, the fields are flooded with seawater, hence the name Seagrass. After harvesting and drying, the Seagrass is spun into a strong yarn suitable for weaving. Its impermeability makes it hard to dye, so most products are natural in colour. It is latex backed for stability and to prevent slipping on wooden or tiled floors.
